

About us

Wrike's mission is to help organizations thrive in the digital age by transforming the way they plan, manage and complete work. Its SaaS-based, work management platform features engaging collaboration, workflow and project management tools built into an intuitive online workspace. Every day, millions of users at over 15,000 companies use Wrike to drive topline processes across their organizations. In 2017, Wrike was named to the Deloitte Fast 500 list of the fastest growing companies in North America for the third consecutive year.

Wrike enables organizations to achieve Operational Excellence, the state in which work processes are scaled to meet the near real-time service expectations of the on-demand market. This entails completing projects of increasing number and complexity while maintaining the highest standards for quality.

Wrike was founded in 2006 by Andrew Filev. As a young entrepreneur, Andrew quickly grasped the challenges organizations faced in scaling a successful operation. Frustrated with the limitations of working through email and spreadsheets, he began to build his own collaborative tools that immediately improved his team's communication and business productivity.

Filev started Wrike to focus solely on building this new class of business software. Over the last decade, he has built Wrike from a small startup to a leading provider of project management, work management and collaboration solutions, initially bootstrapping the company before guiding it to more than $25M in funding.

Today Andrew serves as Chief Executive Officer and remains the primary visionary behind the product and company. In product development, he values innovation velocity with a customer-first approach. As a CEO he strives to create a positive culture and great workplace for the entire Wrike team.
